- Snow
- A bucket or other container
- A spoon or other tool for shaping the snow
- Decorations (optional)

Once you have your materials, you're ready to start building! Here are the steps:

1. Gather your snow. The best snow for building a snow woman is fresh, powdery snow. If the snow is too wet, it will be difficult to pack and shape.
2. Make a snowball. Start by rolling a small snowball in your hands. As you roll it, the snowball will get bigger and bigger. Keep rolling until the snowball is about the size of your head.
3. Place the snowball on the ground. This will be the base of your snow woman.
4. Make another snowball. This snowball should be about half the size of the first snowball. Place it on top of the first snowball.
5. Make a third snowball. This snowball should be about half the size of the second snowball. Place it on top of the second snowball.
6. Shape the snowballs. Use your spoon or other tool to shape the snowballs into the body, head, and arms of your snow woman.
7. Add decorations. If you want, you can add decorations to your snow woman. You can use sticks for arms, a scarf for a neck, and a hat for a head.

Your snow woman is now complete! Enjoy playing with her in the snow.

Tips for building a snow woman

- If the snow is too wet, you can add some sand to it to make it more packable.

- If the snow is too dry, you can add some water to it to make it more pliable.
- If you're having trouble getting the snowballs to stick together, you can try using a little bit of water to help them adhere.
- Be creative and have fun! There's no right or wrong way to build a snow woman.
